‘Greatest show on Earth’ ends; next stop, Rio

By Ted E. Mabanglo

LONDON—The melting pot of a city that dazzled for a fortnight finally bid farewell to its third Olympics on Sunday night with a star-studded celebration of pop music and its energetic culture.

In a Summer Games that saw the United States regain its top spot as the best sporting nation in the world and the Philippines extend its Olympic futility, a triumphant London extinguished the flame that for 16 days had lit up the world.

Goodbye London, hello Rio de Janeiro.

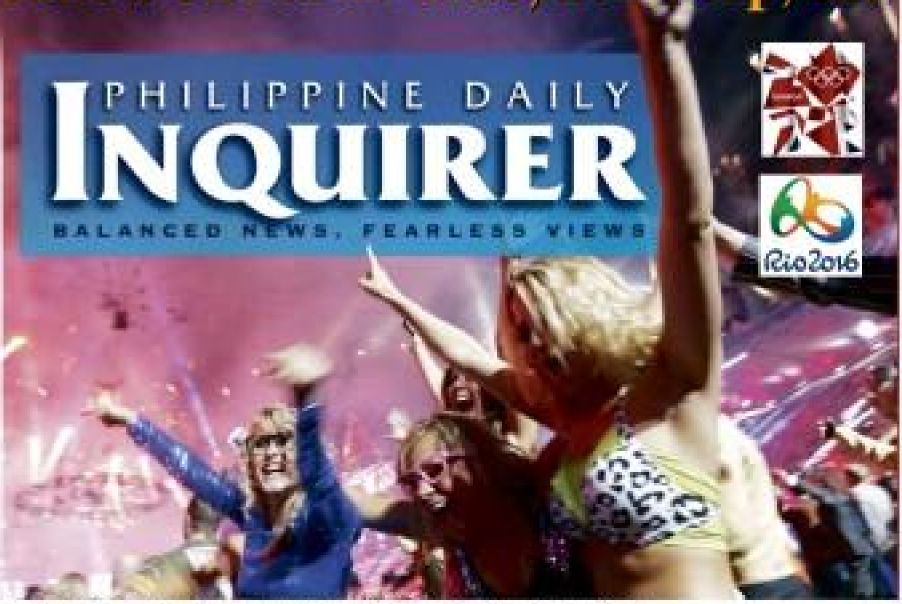

British music, one of Britain's strongest cultural exports over the last 50 years, brought together greats from Queen and Take That to George Michael and the Spice Girls to entertain the real heroes of the 30th Olympiad—the 10,490 athletes.

"Today features the closing of a wonderful Games in a wonderful city," said Sir Sebastian Coe, an Olympic hero and chief organizer of the sporting extravaganza that defied Britain's financial crunch.

"For the third time, we were

Palace favorite De Lima not on short list

By Christine O. Avendaño and Cathy C. Yamsuan

ACTING Chief Justice Antonio Carpio topped the short list of eight candidates that the Judicial and Bar Council (JBC) announced yesterday, but a senator said he believed the next Chief Justice would either be Associate Justice Lourdes Sereno or Solicitor General Francis Jardeleza.

Sereno is President Aquino's first appointee to the high tribunal who held the minority view in its recent ruling regarding the just compensation to workers of Hacienda Luisita, which is owned by his family.

Jardeleza is a lawyer associated with the Chief Executive's uncle, businessman Eduardo "Danding" Cojuangco.

Sen. Panfilo Lacson told reporters he had information that the choice for the post of ousted Chief Justice Renato Corona would be a toss-up between Sereno, 52, and Jardeleza, 62.

GMA brought back to hospital

By Nina Calleja

FORMER President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo was taken to Makati Medical Center (MMC) yesterday for examination after the dislocation of the titanium plate supporting her cervical spine, a condition that a doctor at the hospital described as life-threatening.

Staff at the hospital's call center confirmed that Arroyo, now a Pampanga congresswoman, was admitted to the hospital after her scheduled checkup. They had no other information.

Radio reports said Arroyo, in a wheelchair and wearing a neck brace, arrived at the hospi-

Rains back; tropical storm heading north

By Jeannette I. Andrade

TROPICAL Storm "Helen" (international name: Kai-Tak) may further intensify into a typhoon as it continues to gain strength while moving toward the tip of northern Luzon, raising fears of more flooding in large swaths of the island.

The weather bureau yesterday raised Storm Signal No. 1 over Quirino, Aurora, Isabela, Kalinga, Apayao, Cagayan and Batanes.

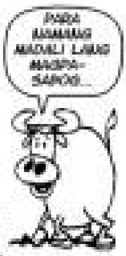

The Philippine Atmospheric, Geophysical and Astronomical Services Administration (Pagasa) warned residents in low-lying and mountainous areas in the provinces to watch out for flash floods and landslides.

As of 4 p.m. yesterday the center of Helen was spotted 430 kilometers east of Casiguran, Aurora province. It was packing maximum sustained winds of 65 kilometers per hour near the center and gustiness of up to 80 kph.

CECILIA CASTELAR-LAGMAN

(01 February 1920 to 13 August 2012)

of Malinao and Tabaco City, Albay, passed away on 13 August 2012 in Quezon City at the age of 92.

Her body lies in state at the Arlington Memorial Chapels at 12 G. Araneta Avenue, Quezon City. Interment will be on Saturday, 18 August 2012, at Loyola Memorial Park, Marikina City.

She is survived by her children Edcel and Ma. Cielo Lagman, Nilda and Silverio Sevilla, Evita and Tirso Tresvalles, and daughter-in-law Lourdes Jopson-Lagman; 16 grandchildren; and 21 great-grandchildren.

She was preceded in death by her husband, former Caloocan City Fiscal Pedro Eduardo D. Lagman Jr., sons, Hermon C. Lagman, a human rights and labor lawyer who was a desaparecido during Martial Law and Filemon "Popoy" Lagman, a labor leader and crusader who was assassinated in 2001 and daughter-in-law Lourdes Garduce-Lagman, a fearless revolutionary.

Nana, as everyone called her, was a committed and exemplary public school teacher for many decades and the founding Chairperson of the Families of Victims of Involuntary Disappearance (FIND), a human rights organization. With her devotion to duty, industry, acerbic wit and unique sense of humor, she was an inspiration both to her family and her many friends.

She was a dedicated wife and mother, a loving grandmother and great-grandmother, an uncompromising human rights advocate, and a loyal friend.

Feisty and strong-willed to the end, her life was epitomized by her dynamic and forceful personality, enduring courage, unfailing optimism and unquestionable moral fiber. She was a pillar of strength and will be deeply missed.

CLOCKWISE, from above: "Meow" party; the "pawty" cake; gourmet dog pizza and other festive treats; Sophie and Oliver's "Bark Voyage" party food and decor

By Anne A. Jambora

A ROARING "party" for your four-legged best friend is now just a bark away.

When huskies Sophie and Oliver moved to Chicago last month, pet party organizer [illegible] Rangiles set up Bark Voyage, a going-away party for the two handsome pooches.

The two 3-year-old "Filipino" huskies—both were born and bred in the country—partied with their friends and their pet parents in [illegible], dined on gourmet food, and participated in a private game activity loaded with treats. There were balloons designed by balloon artists, a specially baked doggie cake and desserts, and homemade "pupsicles" and treats.

Sophie and Oliver wore pouches, compliments of the organizer, while their guests were given colorful bandanas. There were pet and human games and, at the end of the party, guests went home with doggie-bag giveaways.

"This is really an excellent way to bond with your pets, that one time of the year when your pets don't have to beg for food or treats," said events organizer Rangiles, owner of [illegible] Party ([illegible]; tel. 0917-[illegible], 0926-[illegible]; e-mail [illegible]).

Rangiles, who is also the events and PR officer of [illegible] Welfare Phils., always had a soft heart for pets. She grew up in a dog-friendly home, and that during her five-year stint abroad, she became a volunteer in animal rescue organizations where she got acquainted not just with canines and felines, but also with reptiles, rodents and other animals. SHOW Parov Stelar (?)

GUITAR Duel: Megadeth's Dave Mustaine (right) and lead Chris Broderick

By Pocholo Concepcion

WHEN the rains poured nonstop last week, diehard music fans couldn't stay put in their homes and decided it was better to rock out rather than suffer from monsoon depression.

Megadeth

July 29, World Trade Center, Pasay City

Wet weather failed to dampen the spirits of about 1,000 metalheads eager to watch Megadeth whose leader, Dave Mustaine, was the first lead guitarist and a songwriter of Metallica until he was fired in 1983. Mustaine has reportedly mellowed from his former death-defying lifestyle. A right arm injury he suffered 10 years ago must've taught him not to strain himself too much playing the electric guitar.

That night, Megadeth's other guitarist, Chris Broderick, handled most of the solos, which flew at breakneck speed in classic thrash metal tradition.

But Mustaine, now 50, was far from being a doddering has-been as he engaged Broderick in riff-trading duels on several numbers.

When Mustaine sang, or rather growled, he sounded like a monster sniffing out his enemies; Broderick's lead lines, on the other hand, wailed like an ambulance racing against time.

Most of the band's songs harped on anger and violence—though they were not as misdirected as some folks might have thought. "Sweet Dead" and "Headcrusher," for instance, were about hired killers and torture, respectively.

What fans love about thrash metal is its aggressive stance against everything; that's why the power and loudness of the music lead to a catharsis.

At the Megadeth concert, ... while head banging to the bursting of guitars and rolling thunder of drums. His fans almost surely went carrying the downpour outside.

Smashing Pumpkins

Aug. 8, Smart Araneta Coliseum, Quezon City

Originally scheduled Aug. 7 but reset the next day due to the unrelenting rains, the Smashing Pumpkins gig nonetheless brought joy to some 3,000 hardy souls seeking respite from the harsh climate.

The first half of the show was devoted to the band's latest album, "Oceania," which frontman Billy Corgan described at a press con on Aug. 6 as an attempt to deal with alienation and ennui ...

As the rain pours, the music beckons

A GIGANTIC ball above the stage serves as a video screen.

A gigantic ball hanging above the stage symbolized the earth while also serving as a video screen that showed images of life's origins and mysteries, as the band cranked up a golden-eleven wall of sound fortified by progressive keyboards.

When Corgan intoned, "God, right on! Krishna, right on!" on "Quasar," it was like hearing a hippie preaching about spirituality amid an avalanche of psychedelic sounds.

If, by chance, there were folks in the audience who were once flower children, they would've thought Corgan was merely recreating the famed gigs at Fillmore East in New York in the late 1960s.

In any case, the sonic blast featuring Jeff Schroeder's Hendrix-inspired guitar pyrotechnics, Nicole Fiorentino's pounding bass and Mike Byrne's rumbling drums somehow kept us in a state of bliss.

A number of Crossdaters were seen enjoying the show. For the first time, the Big Dome ran out of beer to sell.

Billy Corgan: "God, right on!"

Snow Patrol

Aug. 9, Smart Araneta Coliseum

It was still cloudy earlier in the day but no sign of rain, which goaded Snow Patrol's Pinoy fans to come and watch the band. Some 5,000 people made it to the Big Dome; a festive atmosphere prevailed.

The band played a type of brooding, introspective but melodious rock that appealed a lot to couples possibly reflecting on cherished or regretful moments.

Most of the songs' sedate rhythms verged on the boring. Good thing there was also interesting percussion interplay between drummer Jonny Quinn and somebody who was banging on a bass drum.

The martial beat on "Make This Go On Forever" provided a counterpoint to the song's hopeful lyrics.

"Shut your eyes and sing to me," crooned frontman Gary Lightbody on another number, as he asked the crowd to join him in the chorus. The women happily obliged.

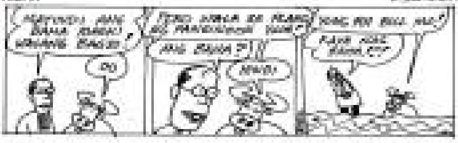

Everyone went wild upon hearing the band's biggest hit, "Chasing Cars." Though it sounded sad, the song was about being with a loved one and letting the world go hang.

Indeed, nobody cared if it rained hard again—and it did.
